

How well do you know your "red"?

All organizations have vulnerabilities and threats. But too many don't have a strong sense of just how big of a risk it presents.

People will "self-assess"; groups will "check the box"; and management will accept that the answers they're getting are a true representation of the real risk to the company. The reality, unfortunately, is different as the "bad actors" that we face are often more technologically sophisticated than we think. It's in the headlines daily.

So know your red. Take the time and trouble to learn what your real risks are, and how to mitigate them! We can help.